

Drama Workshop Wins Award

Just as David felled Goliath with perfect aim, the Cohasset Drama Workshop was right on target as its performance of Story Theatre was selected as the best production at the Emerson College Theatre Arts Festival Jan. 13, defeating larger schools as much as three times the size of Cohasset High. In addition, Beth Donahue was awarded the title of best actress, giving the Drama Workshop victory in two of the three prizes presented.

The presentation was originally performed in November at Cohasset High School.

Stories from such sources as Aesop and the Brothers Grimm are blended with humor and mime to produce a highly original theatre form in Story Theatre.

Beginning in September, the troupe of actors experimented with a variety of roles and interpretations as they attempted to bring the fairy tale characters to life with the help of director Ron Emmons, who labels Story Theatre our most creative work so far.

Appearing in the award-winning production along with Beth Donahue were Missy Barcomb, Cathleen Collins, Meri Fink, Jonathan Foell, David Hanlon, Mary Lagrotteria, Scot Muir, Sally Sisson, James Vivian and Jerry White.

The show will next be performed in regional competition for the State Drama Festival in March. Any local organization interested in a performance of this 40 minute work should contact Ron Emmons at the high school.
